CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

FAP was established by the United States Food Stamp Act of 1977 and is implemented by Title 7 of the Code of Federal Regulati ons. DHS administers FAP pursuant to MCL Section 400.10 et seq. and Michigan Administrative Co de Rules 400.3001-3015. DHS' current FAP policies and procedures are found in Bridges Administrative Manual (BAM), Bridges Eligibility Manual (BEM), and Refe rence Tables (RFT), which are available online at www.mich.gov/dhs-manuals.

In this case, DHS alleges that from August, 2008-December, 2009, a sixt een-month period, Respondent committed an IPV by intentionally reporting a false address in Michigan, when she actually lived in DHS alleges Respondent unlawfully received FAP benefits of $2,110. DHS requests a finding of a first-time FAP IPV. DHS als o requests an Order granting it the author ity to recoup the $2,110 FAP overissuance (OI).

The question before me is whet her there is clear and convincing evidence to prove that Respondent committed an alleged Intentional Program Violatio n according to la w. In this case, the applicable law is found in DHS policies and procedures.

The DHS manual section that is applicable in this case is BAM It em 720, "Intentional Program Violation." which can be found online. www.michigan.gov/dhs-manuals.

I quote BAM 720:

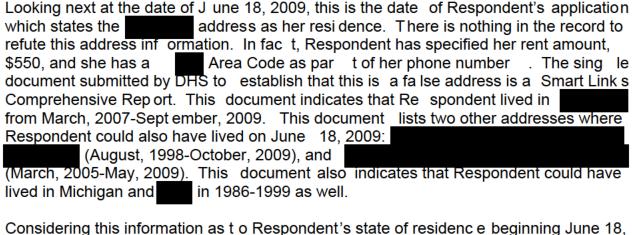

Suspected IPV

Suspected IPV means an OI exists for which all three of the following conditions exist:

- The cli ent intentionally failed to report inform ation or intentionally gave incompl ete or ina ccurate info rmation needed to make a correct benefit determination, and
- The client was cl early and correctly instructed regarding his or her reporting responsibilities, and
- The client has no apparent physical or mental impairment that limits his or her understanding or ability to fulfill their reporting responsibilities. IPV is su spected when there is clear and convincing evidence that the client or CDC provid er has intentionally withheld or misrep resented information for the purpose of establi shing, maintaining, increasing or preventing reduction of program be enefits or eligibility. BAM 720, effective July 1, 2009, p. 1. (Boldface in original.).

Looking at the first IPV elemen t, failure to report, the firs t question I must consider is whether Respondent ever provided a false address to DHS. If Respondent provided her real address, then she did not provide a false one, and DHS' allegations must be denied. The information at issue is Respondent's address.

In determining Respondent's address, I have reviewed all of the evidence and testimony in this case as a whole. I find nothing in the record to show what address Respondent gave to DHS between August, 2008 and June 17, 2009. Ther efore I find there is no factual basis for a conclusion that Respondent gave a false address to DHS during that time. I must find and conclude that no IPV could occur then, because I have no address to examine, much less a false one.

Considering this information as to Respondent's state of residence beginning June 18, 2009, I determine that DHS has not submited address was false. Indeed, according to the information submitted, I cannot rely on the document's accuracy in this matter.

In this cas e however, DHS submitted additional evidence that the Respondent's FAP purchase history, showing 117 purchases in she gave a false address. I decline to make this assumption. This assumption is based on a second assumption, which is that people buy food in the area where they live. While this may be true for many people, I do not find this assum ption to be applicable in this case, where the Respondent appears to have close ties, in all likelihood family ties, in two different states. Stated in another way, I find it is entirely possible that Respondent spends a great amount of her time with family members in while continuing her own personal life in Michigan. Accordingly, I do not find on the record before me that Respondent gave a false address to DHS on June 18, 2009.

In conclusion, based on the findings of fact—and c onclusions of la w above, I find that DHS has not proved by clear and convincing evidence, the first element of IPV. As all three elements must be proved in order for I PV to be established, there cannot be an IPV decision in this case. DHS' request for such a finding is DENIED.

As I make no finding of IPV, I find that no over issuance occurred in this case as well. I find and conclude that Resp ondent was entitled to the F AP benefits she received, and no error occurred in providing F AP benefits to Respondent. DHS' request for an Order permitting recoupment is DENIED.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Administrative Law Judge, based upon the above findings of fact and conclusion sof law, decides and concludes that DHS has failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence that a FAP Intentional Program Violation occurred in this case. D HS' request for a finding of FAP I PV is DENIED. DHS' request for recoupment authority in the amount of $2,110 is DENIED, because no overissuance occurred in this case.
